Roses — The Glory of The Garden

It is a common saying that the love of flowers is universal and considering that the tendency of the age seems to be to subdivide occupations and interests, it is not surprising that many of us should find practically all of our leisure time given to the study and cultivation of flowers. The stress of common life finds much relaxation in the flower garden which affords varied interest, exercise and pleasure the year around, and then we find there is much encouragement in the work of one's own hands. Not only does personal work make one's garden seem better and more attractive, but out of it develops a keen interest in comparison and competition. It is a happy thought for us all that out of the smallest plot of ground one can raise the finest flowers that can be grown.

Roses are grown more largely perhaps than any other class of plants, and for this reason the best methods of culture should be widely disseminated. They are grown in vast numbers under glass in winter, but the greater part by far are planted out for summer blooming.

When Shipment Is Received When plants are received it is well to give careful attention to the protection of the roots until they are planted. Drying of the roots by winds is fatal. Dipping the roots, or "puddling" as it is called, in a thin slushy mud is an advantage and thoroughly protects the roots from the air. When setting the plants in the ground see that the soil is firmed about them well and protect the plants from the direct rays of the sun for a couple of days. When pot plants are purchased with full ball of earth, protection from the sun is not wholly necessary. Water thoroughly after you have made the planting, then cultivate regularly. (See our book, "How to Grow All Kinds of Plants," 35c).

Planting And The Soil Roses must be planted in the right place and in the right manner to secure any degree of success. They should never be planted where they will be shaded too much, and they should always be provided with good drainage. Under trees is no place for them, nor among shrubbery. The best place is in a well-drained part of the garden where they get the sun during the whole morning and partly in the afternoon. The Rose, as well as all other plants, must have plenty of sun in order to produce flowers, and this fact should never be lost sight of in planting. Naturally damp, soggy ground should never be selected for planting, a well-drained soil being necessary. If the soil is inclined to be poor, the addition of some well-rotted cow or horse manure will be of great benefit. The plants should be set about two feet apart. Plants set out with cramped roots never do as well as those having plenty of root room. (See our book, "How to Grow All Kinds of Plants," 35c).

Fertilizing The Rose is a very gross feeder, and will consequently require a liberal supply of manure. The best manure is unquestionably farmyard manure. In all cases, the manure should be well decomposed, as fresh manure will burn the roots. Bone meal is an excellent fertilizer. (See our book, "How to Grow All Kinds of Plants," 35c).

Pruning The object of pruning Roses is to increase their productive power, and also to help the shapely appearance of the plant. Generally speaking, the work is done in the early spring just before the growing season. All weak and old scraggly growth of years previous should be cut out, and old growth that has bloomed a year or more. With old-fashioned Roses, such as Harrison's Yellow, etc., which flower on the old wood of previous season's growth (similar to some hardy shrubs), the pruning should be done right after the flowering season. (See our book, "How to Grow All Kinds of Plants," 35c).

Winter Protection The Roses we offer may be divided into the following classes:

- 1st—HYBRID TEAS—Monthly Blooming or Everblooming Roses or Bush Roses (pages 3-11, inc.). Most of these can be carried through our winters if the ground is banked around the base of the plants and the tops thatched with straw.
- 2nd—HYBRID TEA CLIMBERS (page 12)—These come under same treatment as the Hybrid Teas.
- 3rd—HARDY CLIMBERS, HARDY RAMBLERS AND PILLAR ROSES (pages 13, 14 and 15)—All hardy without protection.
- 4th—HYBRID PERPETUALS AND RUGOSAS—Hardy June Blooming, (pages 16-17)—All hardy without protection.
- 5th—POLYANTHA, BUSH OR BABY RAMBLER ROSES (page 18)—All hardy without protection.

It is well however to protect all Roses from severe winters. The important point is to keep the ground around the base of the plants dry. The plants should be first covered with rough material of some kind to allow a circulation of air over the surface of the ground, and this rough covering can be topped with leaves, manure or other coarse material such as will shed the winter storms of rain, sleet and snow. Plants in winter should be kept dry for the same reason that we keep ourselves dry. Remember, there is much more in common, or should be, between animal and plant life than is acknowledged by most of those who strive for success in the growing of Roses. One must always remember that both demand for their perfect development a sufficiency of nourishing food and drink, a pure atmosphere, a temperature as equable as possible, careful protection and thorough cleanliness. (See our book, "How to Grow All Kinds of Plants," 35c).

ROSES

The Glory of the Garden

No words of praise can adequately convey the extreme beauty of these newer introductions. The superb vigor, the healthy and abundant growth and foliage, the profusion of bloom, the wide range of exquisite coloring and beautiful formation of the flowers of these selected roses place them at once without rivals. These roses belong to the summer blooming class, or those commonly known as monthly bloomers. They represent the best roses available, both as to quality of stock and varieties. The roses offered on this page, and pages 4 and 5, are field-grown budded plants of the three-year size and are carried in pots in cold houses. While dormant they can be shipped without soil by parcel post, but when shipped with the ball of earth they should go by express.

For massive blooms, grandeur of color, ease of culture and certainty of flower there are no plants that will surpass them. The season of bloom lasts up until severe frosts.

The varieties offered have been selected from the best of the different classes and represent the best of their class and color.

When grown for exhibition flowers they should be grown to a single stem or two and disbudded similar to the methods used in growing exhibition Dahlias.

Boston Fern, Most Popular of All. 24c, 50c, 85c.

MOST POPULAR HOUSE PLANT GROWN This Fern is one of the best known varieties grown, and in the long years of its cultivation has proven worthy of a place in every home. Considered the most valuable house plant to be had. It is of easy culture and a very rapid grower, producing fronds of unusual length, frequently measuring six to eight feet in length. Its unusual freedom of growth without special care has made it popular with all admirers of house plants. Price nice young plants, 24c each; 3 for 69c. Stronger plants, 50c each; 3 for $1.45. Larger plants, 85c each; 3 for $2.46.

CULTURAL DIREC-TION—The best soil for all tender Ferns should be light, rich and porous. Drainage should always be provided in the bottom of any pot or receptacle. Watering is important. Ferns should never be allowed to dry out entirely nor should the soil be allowed to become soggy or water logged. A happy medium is best. Foliage should be kept clean. A tobacco solution is generally effective for insects.

Baby's Breath Fern. 29c, 40c and 70c.

The Gold Medal Colorado Fern

Give them good, well drained soil, with no fresh manures in it, a cushion of sharp sand about their roots and a mulch in winter, with no disturbance of the roots for at least several years. Planted in groups of three to six or more of a kind the effect is much better than when planted singly. McGregor's Hardy Garden Perennials

Hardy Perennials are those plants which die down in winter but start again in the spring from the roots, lasting many years and flowering every year. Never before have they been so popular. Beginning in April and lasting until autumn this family of plants produces a constant changing variety of flowers. Perennials are useful for many purposes; rockeries, borders, banks, terraces, edging and cemetery planting and are valuable for cut flowers for the home. Cultivation is simple beginning with any good garden soil for a foundation, and enriched with any good fertilizer. A mulch in hot dry weather will be found beneficial and the covering for winter should be loose and rather coarse so as not to smother the plants. We handle Perennials in all varieties possible, as pot stock which insures against losses that often follow planting plants direct from the field.

McGregor's Hardy Perennials

Gorgeous Peonies

The modern Peony is without doubt one of the most showy and valuable of our hardy herbaceous plants. They may be planted in the sun or semi-shade, singly or in clumps and they will excel all other plants in the grand display of brilliant and fragrant blooms.

A good rich soil gives best results and an open sunny, well drained location is to be preferred. Fall planting is always recommended but spring planting is still favored by many. Avoid planting too deeply, 2 or 3 inches of soil over the crown being sufficient. Set plants about 3 feet apart; hedge plants 18" to 24" apart. Cover lightly with straw or coarse material for winter protection.

McGregor's Hardy Flowering Shrubs

Whether planted individually or collectively, the shrub is an important feature in the adornment of any grounds. There are locations which suggest the planting of individual shrubs, and in such locations their grace and beauty cannot be surpassed. In groups they can be made to emphasize some feature of the lawn, to screen some unsightly object or to destroy the strong stiff lines of foundation walls. At the edges of the lawn, along walks and drives, or in distant corners, a collection of shrubs will give a succession of bloom from the opening of spring until frost. Shrubs with purple and yellow leaves should be added to give character and contrast to plantings. When the leaves have gone, the brilliant fruits of other species and bright, conspicuous bark of certain shrubs add variety and interest to the monotony of winter. The assortment we offer includes varieties suited to every purpose.

McGregor's Hardy Climbing Plants and Vines

Climbing vines are just as necessary to effective landscaping as trees and shrubs. They are robust growers that require little attention, mature quickly, and eliminate stiff, bold angles as well as giving shade and beauty to trellises. They are at their best climbing over bowers and summer houses, and wild and natural in running over trees and stumps. Climbing vines make wonderful screens for unsightly places and may be used as a ground cover beneath old trees where grass will not grow. Most vines prefer cool, shaded exposures, thriving best when planted on northerly sides of buildings in deep, moist, fertile soil. Deciduous vines, however, thrive best in the sun. We offer an incomparable collection of the hardiest vines of real merit and sterling worth.
